Qualification for international protection

Qualification for international protection

Trainings on qualification for international protection focus on the application of legal criteria for granting international protection. They support professionals in analysing complex cases and applying relevant legal concepts in line with EU and international standards.

These trainings address specific and evolving aspects of qualification, supporting a consistent and well-reasoned approach to decision-making in asylum procedures.

Who this training is for

These trainings are intended for:

- asylum case workers and decision-makers
- professionals involved in the assessment of eligibility for international protection
- practitioners seeking to strengthen legal reasoning in complex cases

What these trainings cover

Through these trainings, participants develop knowledge and skills related to:

- applying qualification criteria in complex and specialised cases
- analysing forms of persecution and serious harm

- interpreting legal concepts in line with EU and international law
- assessing individual circumstances in protection cases
- ensuring consistent and well-reasoned decisions

These competencies are essential to ensure that decisions on international protection are fair, consistent, and legally sound.

Available trainings

The following non-accredited trainings are available:
