4.9. Country of origin information

As a general observation, it can be stated that EU+ countries further heightened standards and quality assurance of their COI products in 2018. Austria is introducing a state-of-the-art COI-system for researchers, decision makers and second instance judges and lawyers. The COI-CMS system is designed in cooperation with various end users to directly and efficiently address their needs and it is tailored to keep COI constantly up-to-date and to provide information for asylum decisions and appeal procedures in a timely manner. The Finnish Country Information Service, for instance, created new guidelines for referencing and peer reviewing their COI products.621 In Slovakia, an internal instruction came into effect, specifying the procedure for processing the applicants' country of origin information, granting subsidiary protection in the territory of the Slovak Republic, and fostering mutual cooperation among relevant departments in the Ministry of Interior.

With regard to the overall scope and quality of COI, however, civil society indicated some specific shortcomings and opportunities for progress, such as the concern about a sufficient level of English language capacity in some national authorities when consulting COI, while risking a lack of balance and resp. or not quoting from more recent sources available.

In 2018, the trend of national COI Units engaging in a form of cooperation with their national counterparts - particularly within the EASO COI Specialist Networks, but also on bilateral level - continued. France sustained their bilateral cooperation with Sweden. Romania has engaged in an exchange of expertise with the Belgian CEDOCA.

Adding to a large spectrum of regular publications by established COI Units, some countries reported their new outputs in 2018. Among them, the Greek COI Unit generated around 150 COI products for internal use, with a focus on thematic overviews on the situation of specific groups in Iraq and on countries of origin with low recognition rates. In the Czechia, the COI unit produced brief reports on very specific issues strictly based on ad hoc queries. The Office of the Refugee Commissioner in Malta issued two internal Country Information and Guidance Notes on Venezuela and Sudan. Germany organised multiplier workshops on Afghanistan with lecturers from the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF) and UNHCR which were attended by a total of 50 participants. Lifos, the Swedish Migration Agency's Country Information Service, published around 35 COI reports in the course of 2018. Austria released a Fact Finding Mission Report Afghanistan focusing on socio-economic issues together with the publication of an atlas which covers topographic overviews of issues like ethnic/religious groups, security situation (provinces and districts), oil and gas fields and satellite images of Kabul, Herat, Kandahar, Mazar-e Sharif and Jalalabad. The gathered information also fed into EASO processes.

In the course of 2018, some COI Units expanded or reorganised their staff. The New Media Unit (NMU) in Belgium became fully operational, with two fully dedicated staff members who may receive support from four COI experts on a case-by-case basis. Apart from training other COI experts and protection officers in the use of social media, the NMU conducted specific research on social media, especially for resettlement, origin checks and cases of applying Article 1F of the Asylum Procedure Directive (APD). The Head of NMU was invited by international organisations and Member States to give presentations and training on the use of New Media for protection status determination. Austria is also planning to establish a so-called Social Media

Unit in 2019 to further enhance its COI production and address the changing information needs of decision makers. Estonia amended their AMIF-funded project allowing for their two COI experts to join fact-finding missions in the future, and also joined the MedCOI project.

Among several EU+ countries having conducted fact-finding missions in 2018, the following were reported: Denmark to Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and (with Norway) to the Kurdistan Region of Iraq; France to Georgia and Armenia [622] ; Finland to Afghanistan, Somalia, Syria, and the Russian Federation[623]; Sweden to Albania, Kosovo, Serbia, Bosnia Herzegovina, Somalia and Afghanistan.

Throughout 2018, some COI Units' databases for the provision of information to end users were redesigned or further developed: Belgium adapted their COI platform as a part of their relaunched intranet solution, the Czechia continued development works on their internal COI database pilot system. Lithuania initiated the process of connecting their platform to the EASO COI Portal, expected to be finalised in 2019. Poland further overhauled their COI database using EASO's connection guide as a standard.

As of 1 January 2019, UNHCR has decided to terminate providing COI on their platform Refworld and to endorse the well-established platform ecoi.net managed by the Austrian Red Cross (ACCORD) instead.[624] 'At the same time, UNHCR's Refworld will reinforce its law and policy collections in the course of 2019, relaunching its protection information platform in 2020.[625]

623 The fact-finding missions were carried out as part of an AMIF-funded project called FAKTA, aiming to develop effective and resource-efficient practices for planning and implementing fact-finding missions. The project was launched in 2017 and it will continue until 2020.
