Allowances

Salary & Family Allowances

We offer a competitive salary that is commensurate with your skills and experience. Salaries vary depending on the grade or role for which you are applying.
The primary component of your pay is your basic salary, which is the amount mentioned in your offer letter.

Depending on your personal situation and nationality, you may receive certain allowances (family; education; expatriation and foreign residence allowances; compensation of your costs related to entry into service). These allowances will be fully explained at the time of engagement.

Both basic salary and allowances are multiplied by the country correction coefficient, that is a specific weighting applied to offset the higher or lower cost of living compared with Brussels.

The various components of your remuneration and the correction coefficients are updated every year according to the increase or decrease of the cost of living of each country.
