EU Legal Framework on Asylum and Migration

The European Union Agency for Asylum (EUAA) plays an integral role in supporting EU Member States in the implementation of the EU legislative instruments that comprise the Common European Asylum System \(CEAS\).

The CEAS establishes the legal framework governing asylum and reception in the European Union. It consists of rules and procedures that Member States must follow to ensure that applications for international protection are examined in a fair and efficient manner and that the rights of applicants for international protection are fully respected, in accordance with the 1951 Geneva Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol thereto.

On this page, you can learn more about the legal basis for the Agency's work and consult the different laws that form part of the EU legal framework in the area of international protection. Learn more about the history of the CEAS. Other key texts including those governing important migration management processes in the EU, as well as the Geneva Convention itself, can be reviewed here too.
