4.14.3.4 Fostering cooperation among different stakeholders

nt and implementation of integration strategies require the cooperation of various stakeholders from different backgrounds and governance levels. Diverse initiatives were implemented in 2020 to strengthen the cooperation among these actors.

The Office for Human Rights and Rights of National Minorities in Croatia launched the project "INCLuDE – Inter-sectoral cooperation in the empowerment of third-country nationals", with co-funding from AMIF. The project aims to empower integration stakeholders to participate in the design, implementation and monitoring of integration measures and encourage cooperation at the national, regional and local levels.[1090] The first meeting of local stakeholders was held in October 2020, which discussed the draft Action Plan for the Integration of Persons Granted International Protection (see sub-Section 4.13.3.1).[1091]

The municipalities of Athens and Thessaloniki in Greece initiated the Cities Network for Integration in 2018, which now gathers 13 Greek municipalities to cooperate and exchange knowledge on refugee integration at the local level.[1092]

As part of the Cities and Inclusive Strategies project, funded by ESF, the Czech Association for Integration and Migration published a "Manual on Local Integration", aiming to enhance the knowledge of officials in local and regional authorities on a more strategic approach to integration.[1093] In Estonia, the Ministry of Cultural Affairs published guidelines for local governments on integration services.

The Danish Immigration Service revised and set the placement quotas for 2021, overall around 600 refugees were placed across different municipalities.[1094]
