

1.3.1. Persons affiliated with the government of Bashar Al-Assad

Upon its takeover of power, the transitional administration did not pursue a sweeping de-Baathification process akin to Iraq's post-war policies and the offices of the Baath Party were not systematically targeted. In December, the Baath Party leadership suspended activities.155 At the end of January, it was announced that the party had been dissolved.156

From the outset, the new authorities announced that soldiers who had been recruited under compulsory service were safe, and it was forbidden to assault them. On 9 December, the MOA issued a general amnesty for all military personnel conscripted under compulsory service.157 The new administration subsequently established so-called 'reconciliation centres' to provide temporary civilian identity cards to former members of the police, military, intelligence services, and pro-Assad militias who surrender their weapons.158 These reconciliation centres oversee the process by which former regime affiliates surrender their weapons and register their personal information in exchange for temporary identification cards. These cards grant limited legal protection and safe passage, but the process lacks transparency, follows inconsistent criteria, and is influenced by security agencies, with many applicants facing complex bureaucratic hurdles.159 In late December, the BBC reported significant participation, with hundreds of individuals queuing at a reconciliation centre in Damascus.160

In January and February, local media and organisations following the events in Syria reported that the new administration granted amnesty to some high level figures associated with the Assad government, such as Fadi Saqr, previous leader of the National Defence Forces.161 The MOA was further said to have granted reconciliation to collaborators of Maher Al-Assad, such as businessmen who sponsored his activities,162 as well as Major General Talal Makhlof, leader in the Assad government's Republican Guard.163

Concurrently, the collapse of Bashar Al-Assad's government prompted numerous senior officials and associates of the ruling family to flee to Lebanon. However, Lebanese authorities expelled Syrian officers and soldiers who had entered illegally, returning them to Syria, where they were detained by the new administration.164

By the end of December, the transitional administration intensified efforts to apprehend individuals associated with the ousted government.165 Authorities claimed their arrest campaigns target only individuals who committed crimes on behalf of the Assad regime.166 Campaigns in Deir Ez-Zor, Aleppo, and Tartous focused on confiscating illegal weapons and apprehending suspects involved in illegal activities.167 Nearly 300 individuals were detained in one week alone across Damascus, Latakia, Tartous, Homs, Hama, and Deir Ez-Zor, including former regime informants, pro-Iranian fighters, and lower-ranking military officers. According to SOHR, some detainees accused of having provided intelligence to the Assad government were reportedly executed immediately after their arrest.168 On 10 January, SOHR reported that fighters associated with the transitional administration publicly executed Mazen Kneneh, a local official accused of serving as an informant for the ousted president Assad.¹⁶⁹ In February, further extrajudicial killings of former affiliates of militias supportive of Bashar Al-Assad were reported, such as the assassination of four members of the Meido family, who were part of a local militia, which had fought alongside the previous government. According to SOHR, extrajudicial and revenge killings resulted in the deaths of 287 individuals between the start of 2025 and middle of February 2025.¹⁷⁰

Operations continued throughout January, with members of the general security administration inspecting houses, looking for weapons and individuals who had not reconciled with the transitional administration.¹⁷¹ Extensive military and security operations across key regions, such as the coastal cities, Homs, Hama, Aleppo, and Damascus involved raids, weapons searches, and the further detention of hundreds of individuals.¹⁷² The operations focused on former military fighters and ex-government personnel and resulted in significant amounts of weapons and ammunition seized. The arrested individuals were transported to Homs Central Prison, Hama Central Prison, and Adra Prison in the Rural Damascus area. Additionally, videos posted online showed detainees, apprehended during these operations, enduring physical and verbal mistreatment, including assaults and humiliating treatment.¹⁷³ According to the Syria Justice and Accountability Center, these security operations resulted in various human rights violations, including the reported death of detainees in custody and the arrest of relatives of wanted individuals, affecting both former Assad government affiliates and unrelated civilians.¹⁷⁴ By mid-January, the SOHR reported that over 9 000 combatants and officers remained detained, amid allegations of torture and restricted communication with families.¹⁷⁵ Information by the Syrian Network for Human Rights (SNHR) match the allegations of torture, as reported by families who had bodies of family members returned after their detention by the General Security Directorate.¹⁷⁶ Concurrently, SOHR reported that 275 detainees from the Central Homs Prison were released following a determination of their innocence in war crimes committed against the Syrian population.¹⁷⁷ In January 2025, the transitional administration freed around 641 individuals, mainly from the governorates of Homs, Hama, and Latakia, who had been held in detention for durations spanning a few days to a month, with the majority being released in small groups from Homs Central Prison.¹⁷⁸

At the beginning of February, the Ministry of Information imposed a prohibition on conducting interviews with or disseminating statements attributed to individuals affiliated with the former government.¹⁷⁹

Since the takeover by the transitional administration, remnant pro-Assad groups have conducted small-scale, targeted hit-and-run attacks against its security forces across Syria.¹⁸⁰ These attacks have prompted the authorities to launch operations to capture the culprits which at times resulted in civilian casualties.¹⁸¹ In early March, coordinated attacks by pro-Assad groups on security forces, particularly in the coastal areas, led to a significant escalation which resulted in large numbers of civilian casualties, mostly from the Alawite community.¹⁸² For more information see section 4.1.2.

Next to the transitional administration's operations, incidents of suspected revenge acts, including killings, kidnappings, and arson, by unidentified groups have been documented, though their scale remains unclear. At the end of December, three Alawite judges in Masyaf, responsible for property disputes, were killed, an act condemned by the transitional administration.¹⁸³ In January, SOHR reported the execution of 15 people, including officers of the former government, by unidentified gunmen in Homs governorate. Furthermore, 53 people were arrested and brought to unknown locations.¹⁸⁴

155

Al Jazeera, Syria's new rulers must not repeat the past mistakes of Lebanon and Iraq, 16 December 2024, url

156

Al Jazeera, President al-Sharaa and no more Baath party: What else has Syria announced?, 29 January 2025, url

157

Enab Baladi, ?????? ?????????? ??? ?????? ?? ?????????? [The Operations Administration issues amnesty for conscripts], 9 December 2024, url

158

BBC News, Inside a Syrian 'reconciliation centre' where Assad's soldiers give up their weapons, 29 December 2024, url

159

ISPI, Coming to Terms with the past in Syria: The First, Fragile, Steps of "Transitional Justice", 7 February 2025, url

160

BBC News, Inside a Syrian 'reconciliation centre' where Assad's soldiers give up their weapons, 29 December 2024, url

161

New Arab (The), Fury in Syria as reconciled 'war criminal' from Assad regime visits site of Tadamon massacre, 8 February 2025, url

162

SOHR, Military Operations Administration keeps imprisoning over 9,000 combatants and reconcile figures of corruption of former regime, 13 January 2025, url

163

Syria Justice and Accountability Centre, Human Rights Violations in Syria, December 2024 – January 2025, 22 January 2025, url

164

Reuters, Lebanon returns 70 officers and soldiers to Syria, security official says, 28 December 2024, url

165

New York Times (The), Syria's New Government Steps Up Pursuit of Assad Loyalists, 28 December 2024, url

166

International Crisis Group, Finding a Path through a Perilous Moment for Post-Assad Syria, 10 March 2025, url

167

Enab Baladi, Syria: Ongoing security campaigns against former regime elements, 30 December 2024, url

168

Asharq Al-Awsat, Syria: Nearly 300 Arrested in Crackdown on Assad Loyalists, 30 December 2024, url

169

Al Arabiya, Syria monitor says alleged al-Assad loyalist 'executed' in public, 10 January 2025, url

170

New Arab (The), Syria: String of extrajudicial killings targets ex-regime affiliates, 17 February 2025, url

171

SOHR, Ongoing security campaigns | General security administration launches new arrest campaign in Qatna residences, 28 January 2025, url

172

Enab Baladi, How effective are security campaigns against remnants of Assad's regime?, 22 January 2025, url

173

SNHR, Legal Regulations and Judicial Process Must be Properly Implemented in All Detentions Carried Out as Part of Security Operations, 4 February 2025, url

174

Syria Justice and Accountability Center, Two Months After Assad's Fall, Assad-Like Violations Are Still Being Committed in Syria, 13 February 2025, url

175

SOHR, Military Operations Administration keeps imprisoning over 9,000 combatants and reconcile figures of corruption of former regime, 13 January 2025, url

176

SNHR, SNHR Condemns Torture, Death of Three Detainees at the Hands of the Transitional Government's General Security Directorate, 3 February 2025, url

177

SOHR, Ongoing security campaigns | General security administration launches new arrest campaign in Qatna residences, 28 January 2025, url

178

SNHR, At least 229 Arbitrary Detentions Documented in January 2025, 4 February, url, p. 6

179

Enab Baladi, Syrian Ministry of Information prohibits interviews with figures of previous regime, 7 February 2025, url

180

Etana Syria, Syria Update #21, 8 March 2025, url; International Crisis Group, Finding a Path through a Perilous Moment for Post-Assad Syria, 10 March 2025, url

181

Etana Syria, Syria Update #21, 8 March 2025, url; International Crisis Group, Finding a Path through a Perilous Moment for Post-Assad Syria, 10 March 2025, url

182

International Crisis Group, Finding a Path through a Perilous Moment for Post-Assad Syria, 10 March 2025, url

183

BBC News, Inside a Syrian 'reconciliation centre' where Assad's soldiers give up their weapons, 29 December 2024, url

184

SOHR, Primary death toll | 15 people including officers of former regime killed in Fahil massacre, 25 January 2025, url