

Please cite as: EUAA, '1.5. Implementation of Islamic rules' in COI Report - Syria: Country Focus, July 2025.

1.5. Implementation of Islamic rules

The constitutional declaration stipulates that Islam is the religion of the president and Islamic jurisprudence the primary source of legislation.^{145} This marks a notable shift from the previous constitution, which considered Islamic law as 'a main source' of legislation.^{146}

The president established a new Fatwa Council tasked with assessing whether legislation conforms to Islamic law. Comprised entirely of Sunni members, the 14-person council includes only a few members directly affiliated with HTS, while others have looser ties and more diverse religious leanings.^{147} It is led by Grand Mufti Osama Rifai, a vocal critic of HTS in the past.^{148} Observers suggested that HTS is more focused on containing radical dissent and managing religious discourse than on imposing strict Salafi doctrine.^{149}

Reports emerged in January 2025 indicating that the new authorities were using Islamic teachings to train a fledgling police force.^{150} This move, according to senior police officers, aimed to instil a sense of morality among recruits and is not intended to be imposed on the general population.^{151}

During the month of Ramadan, Syria's interim Ministry of Religious Endowments has reportedly ordered the closure of restaurants, cafés, and street food vendors during daylight hours. Despite no official order issued by the government in this regard, public eating or drinking would reportedly be punished with up to three months in jail.^{152} According to the Syrian Network for Human Rights (SNHR), the authorities carried out arrests of individuals accused of publicly breaking the fast during Ramadan, particularly in Hama city.^{153} No further information was provided and the information could not be corroborated from other sources.

While no new laws were introduced to formally restrict social life^{154}, there were reports of attempts by individuals to enforce Islamic norms in practice, such as flyers being distributed on buses and in Umayyad Mosque in Damascus calling on women to wear full-face veils, and preachers advocating for Islam in Christian neighbourhoods of the capital.^{155} In June, the interim government issued a directive requiring women to wear full body swimwear at public beaches and swimming pools.^{156} Men are also required to wear a shirt when not swimming and are prohibited from being bare-chested outside designated swimming areas.^{157} Private beaches and tourist establishments are exempt from the directive. The government clarified that the directive was intended as guidance only and that no legal penalties would be imposed for non-compliance.158

According to International Crisis Group, some local officials have independently implemented restrictions on women's presence in public and professional spaces, including gender segregation in buses, hospitals, and courts. However, these measures were often reversed by authorities following public backlash.159

Two violent attacks on nightclubs in and around Damascus160 in early May sparked widespread fear, as armed assailants stormed multiple venues, assaulted patrons, and forcibly shut down establishments. One woman was killed during the assaults, and rising incidents targeting mixed-gender entertainment venues serving alcohol have raised concerns of growing influence from Islamist armed groups.161 While the authorities announced arrests after the incident,162 public scepticism reportedly remained high due to the administration's silence and the conservative leanings of several key figures in the government..163

- 145

Security Council Report, April 2025 Monthly Forecast, 31 March 2025, url

- 146

BBC News, Syria leader signs temporary constitution for five-year transition, 14 March 2025, url

- 147

International Crisis Group, What Lies in Store for Syria as a New Government Takes Power?, 25 April 2025, url

- 148

Carenzi, S., An Evolving 'Popular Incubator': Syria's New Leadership and Its Balancing Act, ISPI, 4 June 2025, url; International Crisis Group, What Lies in Store for Syria as a New Government Takes Power?, 25 April 2025, url

- 149

International Crisis Group, What Lies in Store for Syria as a New Government Takes Power?, 25 April 2025, url

- 150

Reuters, Syria's new leaders turn to Islamic law in effort to rebuild Assad's police, 23 January 2025, url; Jamestown Foundation, How al-Sharaa's New Syrian Regime Masks Its Islamism Behind Bureaucracy, 25 March 2025, url

- 151

Reuters, Syria's new leaders turn to Islamic law in effort to rebuild Assad's police, 23 January 2025, url

- 152

AP, Syrians begin fasting during first Ramadan without Assad family rule in decades, 2 March 2025, url

- 153

SNHR, Arrests Arbitrary 117 least Recorded in Syria in March 2025, 10 April 2025, url, p. 8

- 154

BBC News, Syrians have more freedom after Assad, but could they soon lose it?, 18 April 2025, url

- 155

BBC News, Syrians have more freedom after Assad, but could they soon lose it?, 18 April 2025, url; Syrian Observer (The), "Muslims Are More Disturbed Than Christians": Rising Fears Among Syrians Over Islamic Evangelism, 24 March 2025, url

- 156

BBC News, Syria government says women must wear burkinis at public beaches, 12 June 2025, url; Guardian (The), Syria asks women to dress modestly on beaches but says bikinis still allowed, 12 June 2025, url

- 157

BBC News, Syria government says women must wear burkinis at public beaches, 12 June 2025, url

- 158

Guardian (The), Syria asks women to dress modestly on beaches but says bikinis still allowed, 12 June 2025, url

- 159

International Crisis Group, A Helping Hand for Post-Assad Syria, 22 May 2025, url

- 160

France24, Damascus club shooting sparks fears of restriction on freedoms, 5 May 2025, url
; New Arab (The), Attack on Damascus nightclub kills woman, Druze shrine burnt in southern Syria, 5 May 2025, url

- 161

Etana Syria, Syria Update #24, 8 May 2025, url

- 162

France24, Damascus club shooting sparks fears of restriction on freedoms, 5 May 2025, url

- 163

Etana Syria, Syria Update #24, 8 May 2025, url