Bangladesh: Situation update one year after the students' protests

The newly published Country of Origin Information (COI) report on Bangladesh provides information on the political context and human rights situation in the country, with a particular focus on the aftermath of the student protests of July – August 2024 that led to a change of government and policies.

The current political context in Bangladesh stems from student protests in July-August 2024, triggered by the reinstatement of a civil service quota system. Following a violent crackdown by security forces, the protests escalated into a nationwide movement. With growing public support, the protests forced then Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina to flee to India and led to the resignation of her government after 15 years in power.

A new interim government, led by the Nobel Peace Prize laureate Muhammad Yunus, has been tasked with leading the country until the next election which is foreseen to take place in the first half of 2026.

The interim government is trying to forge consensus among political parties on a reform plan ahead of the election, aimed at restoring democratic institutions. Reforms have not yet been implemented, but the interim government has initiated accountability efforts for abuse committed by State actors under the former government, inter alia by signing the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance (CED) and setting up an inquiry commission to investigate enforced disappearances under the former government.

The interim government has however been facing challenges with a deteriorating law-and-order situation, marked by increasing mob violence and incidents of violence against women and girls. Retaliatory violence has also been targeting supporters of the former government. The Hindu community has been experiencing several attacks with intersecting motives but often based on a perceived affiliation with the former government.
