

2.3.2. Situation of unmarried, widowed, divorced women and women without support network

2.3.2. Situation of unmarried, widowed, divorced women and women without support network

Within the phenomenon of so-called ‘baby-factories’, teenage girls or unmarried young women have been forced into sex-slavery and trafficked as ‘baby-making machines’ across the country.^{312} For more information see 2.2.4. Women victims of trafficking.

A 2024 study indicated a high incidence of poverty among unemployed and unmarried women in North Central Nigeria, due to limited access to education and training, and difficulties supporting themselves.^{313} The director of WOCON told the EUAA that single women often face severe barriers to accessing housing, employment, education, healthcare, and other essential services. Most belong to low-income backgrounds, have not attended school and have limited awareness of their rights or available support systems. There is also a clear urban-rural divide: in urban centres, even if people are unaware of their rights, they might still receive information or guidance from neighbours. In rural areas, by contrast, overall awareness is lower, and communities often lack such information or support. Further, single women who lack support network, including divorced women and victims of trafficking, are often perceived by society and even their families as ‘morally questionable’ or ‘loose.’ This perception leads to deep stigma and social exclusion.^{314} Landlords often view single women as financially unreliable,^{315} or assume they are sex workers.^{316} For more information see 2.2.8. Social attitude towards returnee victims of trafficking.

Divorced women face significant challenges due to limited economic independence and the stigma associated with being single. This combination often leaves them vulnerable to isolation, financial hardship, and emotional strain. As reported by the Guardian, ‘Nigerian society often views a woman who is no longer in her husband’s home as unworthy of marriage, regardless of the circumstances.’^{317}

Widows may face abuse,^{318} social exclusion, and accusations after their husbands’ deaths.^{319} Deprived of spousal income, many descend into poverty and struggle to secure basic needs such as food and shelters.^{320} Moreover, disposal of the estate in Nigeria is governed by customary law,^{321} which often forbid widows from inheriting their late husband’s assets. ^{322} This may leave them in extreme poverty, isolated from friends and family, and vulnerable to physical, emotional, and sexual abuse. Customs and traditions have continued to ‘encourage gender-based violence against widows’. Traditional leaders, church groups, and government agencies enable these abuses through inaction and a lack of political will, while victims’ silence further reinforced their vulnerability.^{323} Widowhood cultural practices were described as ‘inhumane or unfair’. Examples included ‘shaving of hair including private parts, wearing only black clothing throughout the mourning period from six months to one year, isolation/alienation, drinking water used to bathe the corpse, levirate marriage,^{324} dispossession from husband’s property, and ritualised weeping^{325}’.^{326}

Eziechine, A. O. and Esene, Q. O., Baby Factory Syndicate: An Emerging Trend of Trafficking in Angunloye's Disposable Womb, June 2024, url, p. 166

313

Marwa, Z. and Mainoma, H. M., Evaluating the incidence of poverty among unemployed and unmarried women in North Central Nigeria, February 2024, url, p. 113

314

Omaiboje M., email communication with EUAA, 8 July 2025

315

Daily Trust, Stereotypes, Biases Women Face In Quest For Accommodation, 14 December 2024, url; HumAngle, What It Costs to Rent a House As A Single Woman in Nigeria, 28 August 2024, url

316

HumAngle, What It Costs to Rent a House As A Single Woman in Nigeria, 28 August 2024, url

317

Guardian (The), Female Genital Mutilation: Action, not words, needed to end menace, 7 March 2025, url

318

Anuforo, P. et al., Influences of Widowhood Cultural Practices, Values, and Beliefs on the Health and Well-being of Nigerian Women: An Integrative Review, 6 October 2024, url; Punch, Heartrending tales of vulnerable widows battling for survival amid soaring cost of living, 1 June 2024, url

319

Punch, Heartrending tales of vulnerable widows battling for survival amid soaring cost of living, 1 June 2024, url; Uroko, F., 'Plead the case of the widow' (Isaiah 1:17): The stigma of widowhood in eastern Nigeria and the needed faith-based interventions, 7 November 2024, url, p. 43

320

This day, From Struggle to Strength: Nigerian Widows Find Hope, 25 September 2024, url

321

Cookey, M., A legal appraisal of the Inheritance rights of women in Nigeria, October 2024, url, p. 1

322

Vivian, A. E., Challenges of Women Inheritance Rights Under the Act and the Various Customs in Nigeria, 18 January 2025, url, p. 42

323

Uroko, F., 'Plead the case of the widow' (Isaiah 1:17): The stigma of widowhood in eastern Nigeria and the needed faith-based interventions, 7 November 2024, url, p. 43

324

Levirate marriage is a custom or law requiring a widow to marry her deceased husband's brother or a close male relative to ensure the deceased's lineage and property continue. See Encyclopaedia Britannica, Levirate, n.d., url

325

In some Yoruba communities, widows are expected to keep vigils and demonstrate intense sorrow through ritualised wailing and profuse crying; failure to do so is believed to risk mental illness or loss of entitlements. See Dijeh A. E. et al., Cultural Challenges of Widows and Widowers' Coping Strategies in SouthSouth Geo Political Zone, Nigeria, 2 February 2025, url, p. 551

326

Anuforo, P. et al., Influences of Widowhood Cultural Practices, Values, and Beliefs on the Health and Well-being of Nigerian Women: An Integrative Review, 6 October 2024, url, p. 189