4.1.6. Forced displacement

Colombians continues to have among the world's largest displaced populations, with nearly 7 million people internally displaced in a protracted humanitarian crisis driven by armed violence, 495 and averaging 150 000 496 newly displaced persons per year, with more than 280 000 registered IDPs in 2022 according to UNHCR. 497 Conflict-related displacement is caused by the security situation, security threats, intimidation, and extortion. 498 Decades of internal displacement driven by the presence of multiple armed and criminal groups have affected millions of people, and despite the signing of the 2016 FARC-EP Peace Agreement, individual displacement has become the dominant trend, surpassing mass displacement, 499 though individuals may experience both types of displacement. 500 Individual displacement, 501 differently from mass displacement, tends to be underreported, and locating reliable data is challenging. 502

Annual figures on displacement vary widely among sources, including between different government sources, due to differences in definitions and mandate; a table of major sources is provided below.

Most sources indicate frequent displacement occurring typically in the same conflict-affected departments year after year, 503 being mainly in the Pacific region. 504 According to multiple sources, the departments most affected in the reference period have been: Antioquia, Arauca, Bolívar, Caquetá, Cauca, Chocó, Córdoba, Nariño, Norte de Santander, Putumayo, Sucre, and Valle del Cauca. 505 Afro-descendant and indigenous communities in the Pacific coast departments were disproportionately affected. 506 Disaster-related displacement due to flooding and drought was lower in 2024 than it was in the previous two years, but with 91 000 movements, still represented the third-highest amount in more than a decade. 507

Between 1 January and 19 June 2025, UNOCHA recorded a total of 168 300 people affected in at least 112 humanitarian emergencies, 508 of which 67 800 people were victims of mass forced displacement, due especially to the events in Catatumbo in January, representing a 107 % increase compared with the same period in 2024. 509 UNHCR reported similarly that, since January 2025, the escalation of confrontations between armed groups caused the 'worst humanitarian crisis in a decade' with a 74 % increase in displacements and 15 % increase in confinements during the first half of 2025. Specifically, in Catatumbo region, there were 57 259 people displaced and 27 868 people confined as a result of conflict outbreaks there; causing the 'most significant large displacement in Colombia's recent history'. 510 For its part, the Office of the Ombudsperson reported that, between 1 January and 30 May 2025, 77 719 people were displaced, of which 68 347 were from Catatumbo.⁵¹¹ Below is a table of sources reporting on various displacement figures, both mass and individual displacement:

Year	IDMC	UNOCHA	ICRC	UARIV	Ombudsperson
		(Mass Displacement)	(Individual Displacement)	(Mass Displacement)	(Mass Displacement)
2022	339 000 512	70 267 513	123 220 514		58 269 515
2023	293 000 516	62 967 517	145 049 518		54 665 519
2024	388 000 520	180 000 521	117 697 522	41 228 523	25 611 524

The Unit for the Attention and Integral Reparation to the Victims (Unidad para la Atención y Reparación Integral a las Víctimas, UARIV), the national unit providing assistance to victims of armed conflict, records the number of displaced people, but these figures largely rely on IDPs actively declaring their status to the UARIV.⁵²⁵ However, IDPs frequently avoid reporting their displacement status due to fear for their safety, perceived uselessness, or lack of procedural knowledge. While the legal framework in Colombia offers comprehensive provisions for victims of displacement, implementation fell short and insufficient services were provided to those affected.⁵²⁶

In January 2004, The Constitutional Court issued Sentence T-025 which declared the lack of protection for displaced persons as unconstitutional; yet few advances in protection have occurred in the 20 years since that declaration.⁵²⁸ There is often a lack of sufficient government assistance for displaced people.^{1115F}⁵²⁹ IDPs report perceived institutional distrust, inadequate assistance, and delays due to bureaucracy as the main reasons they do not report their situation to the UARIV.⁵³⁰
