

3.2.7. Islamic State Khorasan Province (ISKP) and Islamic State Pakistan Province (ISPP)

Islamic State Khorasan Province (ISKP), formed in 2015, is a regional affiliate of the Islamic State (IS) group.³⁹² ISKP follows a Salafist-jihadist ideology³⁹³ and in recent years has evolved towards adopting a more global posture.³⁹⁴ The group maintains a presence in Pakistan.³⁹⁵ Estimates of the size of the group during the reference period ranged from around 2 000³⁹⁶ to 4 000–6 000 fighters.³⁹⁷ The group, which has a history of attacking military and civilian targets in Pakistan,³⁹⁸ maintains a decentralised network of cells in the country.³⁹⁹ Despite experiencing a number of setbacks due to security operations in 2024 and 2025,⁴⁰⁰ it continues to present an ‘unpredictable’ security challenge to the state due to its resilience and ‘difficult-to-trace and rapidly evolving operational tactics’, according to an Islamabad-based security analyst.⁴⁰¹ Meanwhile, its operational footprint during the reference period was more limited compared to that of other militant groups like TTP, HGB/IMP⁴⁰² and major Balochi militant groups.⁴⁰³

Islamic State Pakistan Province (ISPP) is a separate regional Islamic State affiliate that split from ISKP in 2019 and focuses on Pakistan. It primarily operates in Punjab, Sindh, Balochistan and AJK while being less present in KP. While the group was generally known for conducting smaller-scale attacks (including acts of sectarian violence),⁴⁰⁴ it claimed several major deadly attacks in Balochistan in 2024⁴⁰⁵ and 2025⁴⁰⁶ and Islamabad in February 2026. Abdul Sayed, a conflict analyst based in Sweden, was quoted by Al Jazeera as saying that since 2019, ISPP carried out about 100 attacks, most of them in Balochistan.⁴⁰⁷
