

2.7.2. Alawites

Alawites constitute between 9 %547 and 10 % of Syria's population548. They are primarily concentrated along Syria's coastal and mountainous hinterlands (Tartous and Latakia governorates), with smaller communities present in Homs, Hama, and Damascus.549 During the rule of Hafez al-Assad and Bashar al-Assad, themselves members of the Alawite minority, Alawites held disproportionate influence in Syria's military, intelligence and political institutions, though much of the rural population remained economically marginalised.550 Their overrepresentation in key positions within the Syrian state and longstanding association with the Assad government contributed to widespread perceptions of Alawite complicity in the regime's actions,551 as well as to mistrust and resentment toward the community, particularly among the new authorities and segments of the Sunni population.552

Targeting by transitional government security forces and affiliated armed actors

The UNCOI documented cases of arbitrary detention, as well as torture and ill-treatment of Alawite individuals in detention by transitional government forces between January and October 2025. Cases involved Alawites who were former SAA members including some who underwent reconciliation, civilians affiliated with the former government, as well as civilians accused to be remnants of the former regime.553 Deaths of Alawite detainees arrested in early 2025 while in transitional government detention facilities were also documented by the UNCOI.554

In March 2025, a large-scale violence erupted against Alawite community in Latakia, Tartous, Homs and Hama governorates amidst clashes between pro-Assad remnants, transitional government security forces and private individuals operating alongside them. The violence led to over 1 400 people, including around 100 women, predominantly civilian Alawites being killed.555 UNCOI investigations found reasonable grounds to believe that members of the parties involved in the incidents, including transitional government security forces, committed violations of international humanitarian and human rights law, some of which may constitute war crimes.556

Since July 2025, the transitional government has introduced corrective measures, such as reducing checkpoints, rotating personnel and arresting individuals linked to earlier abuses, which have limited overt misconduct by state-affiliated forces. However, these steps have not significantly improved the security in the areas affected, leaving minorities exposed to violations by non-state actors and ongoing intercommunal tensions.557 Many Alawites who fled the March 2025 violence to Lebanon reportedly remain abroad,558 while thousands of Alawites reportedly relocated to SDF-controlled areas in northeast Syria. Around 2 000 are estimated to have joined the SDF incentivised by the monthly USD 200 stipend paid to fighters.559 The Alawite community's trust in the transitional government has been undermined by its perceived failure to protect civilians, allegations of involvement of some of its personnel in the March atrocities, and the absence of credible efforts to ensure accountability or prevent the recurrence of such abuses.560

Targeting by non-state armed actors and unidentified actors

Incidents of harassment, abduction, killings561, torture, ill-treatment, and forced displacement of Alawite civilians in Damascus562, the coastal areas and in Homs and Hama governorates continued after the March 2025 violence.563 The perpetrators are often reported to be non-state armed actors.

In November 2025, the killing of a couple from the Bani Khalid Bedouin tribe in Zaydal, southern Homs accompanied by sectarian slogans found at the crime scene and fuelled by portrayal of the crime as a sectarian attack committed by Alawites,564 sparked retaliatory attacks against Alawite-majority neighbourhoods, including al-Bassel and al-Muhajirin. Armed tribal members vandalised and burned property, fired on homes and shops, and the violence spread to additional areas of the province as dozens of armed individuals called for revenge. In response, the MoI imposed a curfew and deployed security forces, establishing checkpoints and conducting patrols to contain the unrest. Health authorities in Homs reported that at least 18 people were injured in the violence, while the Alawite organisations stated that attacks carried out by members of Bedouin tribes resulted in two fatalities.565 Large protests were held as a result in Alawite-majority areas in Latakia, Tartous, Homs and Hama.566

On 26 December 2025, a bombing at an Alawite mosque in Homs city killed at least eight civilians and injured 20 others, with Saraya Ansar al-Sunna claiming responsibility.567 Two days later, protests erupted in coastal areas, including Latakia and Tartous, where Alawite demonstrators called for security and political guarantees.568 Clashes between protesters, transitional government supporters and security forces reportedly left at least three civilians and one security officer dead and more than 100 injured.569 Syrian authorities attributed the violence to pro-Assad loyalists who attacked security forces, while monitoring groups reported that security forces were responsible for some deaths during clashes and the dispersal of demonstrations in Latakia, where confrontations between protesters and counter-protesters also involved beatings, stone-throwing and gunfire being shot in the air.570 In the aftermath of the protests, unidentified individuals attacked Alawite-majority neighbourhoods in Latakia, damaging cars and vandalising shops. Authorities imposed a curfew and arrested 21 individuals it labelled as former regime remnants who were reportedly inciting sectarianism and targeting security forces.571

Since early 2025, a pattern of assassinations of Alawites by unidentified armed individuals has been reported in Alawite-inhabited areas, particularly in Homs city and its countryside.572 At least 40 Alawites were killed in Homs in separate attacks between 5 June and 31 October 2025. Incidents of kidnapping and murder in Homs governorate also increased, particularly affecting Alawite-majority areas. SNHR assessed that most of these attacks were acts of revenge against former members of the regime and perceived collaborators.573 During the first two months of 2026, local activists documented the killing of 30 civilians in Homs city, the majority Alawites, carried out by unidentified gunmen on motorcycles.574 According to sources, the victims reportedly included civilians with no known prior involvement in the conflict or in human rights violations, reinforcing a growing perception within the community that sectarian affiliation has itself become a risk factor.575

Situation of Alawite women

In the aftermath of the March 2025 violence, the number of Alawite female-headed households increased since most of the fatalities were men. The absence of male family members in a patriarchal context has left affected women vulnerable to exploitation, property disputes, and increased risks of gender-based violence and harassment. Women reported facing stigma and abuse when seeking death certificates at civil registries, their deceased being labelled traitors or insurgents. The loss of primary breadwinners has undermined economic stability and, in some cases, discouraged widows from returning to work after the massacres.576

Throughout 2025, there were reports of women and girls, primarily from Alawite communities, who were abducted577 across several governorates, including Damascus, Latakia, Tartous, Hama, Rural Damascus and Homs.578 The UNCOI documented 21 cases affecting women and four girls, in which perpetrators typically were unidentified armed actors, organised criminal groups or individual criminals, while one case implicated foreign fighters nominally integrated into government forces. During captivity, many victims were subjected to beatings, sectarian slurs and, in some cases, ransom demands, suggesting both sectarian and financial motives. At least eight abductees experienced sexual violence, including gang rape and forced marriage, and three survivors returned pregnant.579

The Stop the Abduction of Syrian Women campaign documented 130 abduction cases from February to December 2025, mostly affecting Alawite women, with 36 still missing.580 The Syrian Feminist Lobby, an advocacy group for women in Syria, documented more than 80 disappearances between February and December 2025, at least 26 of which were confirmed kidnappings, and nearly all reported victims identified as Alawite women.581

A New York Times investigation, based on dozens of interviews with Alawite victims, their relatives and individuals involved in the cases, found that kidnappings were widespread and often carried out with brutality. In some cases, ransom was requested by kidnappers. The investigation verified the abduction of 13 Alawite women and girls, as well as one man and one boy; five victims reported rape, and two returned pregnant. Victims reported being abducted either by fellow Syrians motivated by money or sectarian revenge or by foreign jihadists. Many victims claimed their captors insulted Alawites and justified robbery and sexual violence against them, reflecting narratives promoted by extremist Islamist groups.582

State responses to abduction reports were inconsistent, with some investigations left incomplete, families sometimes discouraged or threatened from pursuing cases, and in two instances victims themselves arrested on morality-related charges after being rescued.583 In November 2025, the Mol stated that, of 42 alleged cases it investigated, only one was confirmed to be an abduction.584 The Syrian authorities dismissed the findings of the New York Times investigation as unsubstantiated, stating that no evidence was found of systematic abductions of Alawite women.585

Situation of Alawites working in the public sector

Widespread public-sector layoffs enacted by the transitional government after taking power, including the dismissal of the entire former regime's security apparatus,586 has disproportionately affected the Alawite community,587 reflecting both targeted sectarian measures and their overrepresentation in government employment under Assad.588 This measure resulted in a large number of unemployed Alawite men with military training and limited prospects.589 Wives of former officers reportedly also lost their public-sector positions, including in the education and health sectors, apparently after being deemed guilty by association.590

For many affected individuals, the loss of employment also resulted in the loss of government-provided housing.591 Social and military housing originally provided to public-sector employees, military personnel, and low-income households, along with informal settlements inhabited by Alawites on expropriated land, have been subjected to property destruction and forced evictions, frequently carried out by armed men affiliated with government forces.592 Alawite residents of military and social housing in the Al-Somarya and Al-Zahryat areas of Damascus were reportedly evicted after receiving only hours or days' notice, with properties looted and male residents allegedly arrested. The transitional government, however, stated that the evacuations followed a one-month notice period and that no incidents occurred during the process.593

While there were reports of authorities reinstating most non-security public-sector employees, implementation remained inconsistent. Former security-sector personnel continued to be excluded.594

Housing, Land, and Property issues

Following the fall of the Assad government, residents of dozens of Alawi villages in northern Hama fled, after which individuals from nearby communities looted property and seized agricultural land. Attempts by displaced villagers to return were reportedly hindered by authorities' inability to ensure security, while their land continued to be used in their absence without the authorities intervening. Those Alawites who did not flee were subjected to insults, death threats and ill-treatment including from alleged government security forces.595 Looting, seizure, and destruction of property belonging to Alawite residents were reported in Homs city and surrounding rural areas in the context of security operations conducted between December 2024 and March 2025. The perpetrators reportedly included government forces as well as armed Sunni and Bedouin groups.596

A STJ report documented displacement of Alawites from villages in northern Hama as well as ongoing abuses, including direct security threats and a lack of protective measures preventing their return. Meanwhile, their property was extensively looted, and organised entities, most notably Idlib-based Iktifaa Company, took control of agricultural lands under the pretext of investment, depriving owners of their primary livelihoods.597

France24, In Syria's Alawite area, joy at Assad fall but fear of Islamism, 16 December 2024, url

- 548

UN Human Rights Council, Violations against civilians in Coastal and Western Central Syria in January - March 2025, 11 August 2025, url, para 31

- 549

Shahin, K., The Existential Challenge for Syria's Alawites, NLM, 12 May 2025, url

- 550

UN Human Rights Council, Violations against civilians in Coastal and Western Central Syria in January - March 2025, 11 August 2025, url, paras 31, 33

- 551

UN Human Rights Council, Violations against civilians in Coastal and Western Central Syria in January - March 2025, 11 August 2025, url, paras 33

- 552

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, pp 8-11; DK, DIS, Syria, Situation of Certain Groups, December 2025, url, p. 75 [international organisation]; SJAC, The Syrian Government Must Investigate the Targeting of Alawite Civilians in Homs, 13 May 2025, url;

- 553

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, Annex I paras 15-18, 24-27, 31-32

- 554

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, Annex I paras 55-60

- 555

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, para 37

- 556

UN Human Rights Council, Violations against civilians in Coastal and Western Central Syria in January - March 2025, 11 August 2025, url, para 91

- 557

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, p. 23

- 558

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, p. 23

- 559

Al Monitor, After SDF-Damascus truce, is Kurdish haven still safe for Syria's Alawites?, 18 February 2026, url

- 560

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, p. 23

- 561

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, p. 23

- 562

OHCHR, "The future of Syria is in the balance:" UN Commission sounds alarm on renewed violence amid hopes for justice and peace, 30 October 2025, url

- 563

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, para 37; International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, p. 22

- 564

STJ, Zaidal/Homs Crime: Disinformation and Sectarian Incitement Behind Violence Against Civilians, 3 February 2026, url, p. 3

- 565

Al Monitor, Curfew extended in Syria's Homs following Bedouin-Alawite clashes: What to know, 24 November 2025, url

- 566

International Crisis Group, Crisis

- 567

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, para 100; Security Council Report, Syria January 2026 Monthly Forecast, 30 December 2025, url

- 568

Security Council Report, Syria January 2026 Monthly Forecast, 30 December 2025, url

- 569

Al Jazeera, Deadly protests and clashes in Syria – what happened and what’s next?, 29 December 2025, url; International Crisis Group, Crisis Watch Syria, n.d., url

- 570

Le Monde, Deadly violence erupts during protests in Alawite regions of Syria, 29 December 2025, url

- 571

Al Jazeera, Syrian authorities impose curfew in Latakia as violence surges, 30 December 2025, url

- 572

SJAC, The Syrian Government Must Investigate the Targeting of Alawite Civilians in Homs, 13 May 2025, url; SNHR, No Fewer than 20 Civilians Extrajudicial Killed in Homs City Between April 23-28, 2025, 30 April 2025, url; MEE, One month on, killings persist in Syria’s Alawi heartlands, 11 April 2025, url; Syria Direct, Extrajudicial killings of Alawites plague Homs city, 9 May 2025, url

- 573

BBC News, 'Killed because they are Alawites': Fear among Syria's minorities after the fall of Assad, 10 November 2025, url

- 574

Enab Baladi, Homs, Syria: “Mobile Killings” Claim 30 Civilian Lives in Two Months, 1 March 2026, url

- 575

Enab Baladi, Homs, Syria: “Mobile Killings” Claim 30 Civilian Lives in Two Months, 1 March 2026, url; STJ, Drive-by Killings: A Recurrent Pattern of Direct Killings Using Motorcycles Against Civilians in Syria, 26 February 2026, url

- 576

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, p. 24

- 577

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, paras 69-73; AI, Syria: Authorities must investigate abductions of Alawite women and girls, 28 July 2025, url; OHCHR, Syria: UN experts alarmed by targeted abductions and disappearances of Alawite women and girls, 23 July 2025, url

- 578

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, paras 69-73; STJ, Abduction in Syria: Alawite Women Most Targeted Amidst Transitional Government Inaction, 23 February 2026, url

- 579

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, paras 69-73

- 580

STJ, Abduction in Syria: Alawite Women Most Targeted Amidst Transitional Government Inaction, 23 February 2026, url

- 581

AI Monitor, After SDF-Damascus truce, is Kurdish haven still safe for Syria's Alawites?, 18 February 2026, url

- 582

New York Times (The), In Syria, Kidnappings of Women and Girls Fuel a Minority Group's Fears, 3 April 2026, url

- 583

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, para 74

- 584

New Arab (The), Investigative flaws undermine accountability for Syria's coast sectarian massacres, 9 March 2026, url

- 585

SANA, Syria's Information Ministry rejects New York Times report on alleged abductions, 4 April 2026, url

- 586

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, pp. 10-11

- 587

International Crisis Group, Finding a Path through a Perilous Moment for Post-Assad Syria, 10 March 2025, url; STJ, Mass Dismissals in Syria After the Regime's Fall, 13 May 2025, url, pp. 4, 9; Anjarini, S., Investigating the Alawite Massacres, New Lines Magazine, 12 May 2025, url

- 588

Anjarini, S., Investigating the Alawite Massacres, New Lines Magazine, 12 May 2025, url

- 589

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, pp. 10-11; UN Human Rights Council, Violations against civilians in Coastal and Western Central Syria in January - March 2025, 11 August 2025, url, para 37

- 590

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, pp. 10-11

- 591

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, pp. 10-11

- 592

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, para 96

- 593

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, paras 100-105

- 594

International Crisis Group, Restoring Security in Post-Assad Syria: Lessons from the Coast and Suweida, 26 November 2025, url, pp. 10-11

- 595

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, paras 81-82

- 596

UN Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic (A/HRC/61-62), 12 March 2026, url, paras 84-88

- 597

STJ, Syria/Rural Hama: Forced Displacement and Unlawful Seizure of Property against Alawites following the Fall of al-Assad, 6 February 2026, url