

2.9. Women and girls

2.9.1. General overview of violations against women

The protracted conflict in Syria has exacerbated gender inequalities, exposing women and girls to increased violence, displacement and discriminatory legislation.⁷⁸³ Women continued to be excluded from decision-making in the new transitional government and to have a limited role in political processes.⁷⁸⁴ Although several women were appointed to transitional justice bodies, only one woman was appointed to a ministerial position,⁷⁸⁵ specifically as the minister for social affairs and labour.⁷⁸⁶ Following indirect parliamentary elections in October 2025, only six women were elected,⁷⁸⁷ representing approximately 4 % of seats in total⁷⁸⁸ and marking a decrease in women's representation.⁷⁸⁹

According to SNHR, at least 29 358 women and girls have been killed in Syria between March 2011 and November 2025, over 75 % of them attributed to the security forces of the Assad regime.⁷⁹⁰ Following the fall of the Assad regime, reports of women being killed by armed actors⁷⁹¹ or as a result of armed clashes⁷⁹² continued.⁷⁹³ However, the majority of the 312 women fatalities documented by SNHR in 2025⁷⁹⁴, and the 27 recorded during the first quarter of 2026⁷⁹⁵, were attributed unidentified perpetrators and landmines.⁷⁹⁶

According to several Syrian human rights and non-governmental organisations, the situation of women in Syria reportedly varies significantly depending on their sectarian, regional and socioeconomic background.⁷⁹⁷ Specifically, non-Sunni women ‘appear more vulnerable, especially when their identity is visible through appearance or behaviour’, and most cases of discrimination, harassment and abuse against women were reported from minority areas.⁷⁹⁸ Similarly, women in smaller towns and rural communities often live under stricter cultural norms and rely on family networks for protection.⁷⁹⁹

Throughout 2025, disappearances⁸⁰⁰ and abductions of Alawite women and girls, have been reported.⁸⁰¹ According to the Syrian Feminist Lobby (SFL), an advocacy group for women's rights, the disappearance of more than 80 women, mainly Alawite, has been recorded between February 2025 and December 2025.⁸⁰² In July 2025, at least 36 women and girls, aged 3 to 40, were reportedly abducted, with several incidents occurring in broad daylight, by unidentified individuals across multiple governorates including Latakia, Tartous, Hama, Homs,⁸⁰³ Damascus, and Aleppo.⁸⁰⁴ In several cases of abductions members of the security forces or individuals affiliated with the government were reportedly involved.⁸⁰⁵ Some women were released following the payment of ransom demands.⁸⁰⁶ Those held in abduction reportedly faced physical assault, sexual violence, and forced marriage.⁸⁰⁷ According to sources, police and security forces failed to conduct effective investigations on these cases,⁸⁰⁸ occasionally refusing to register complaints or dismissing families' concerns.809 In November 2025, the Mol's spokesperson stated that following an investigation, only one out of a total of 42 reported cases was confirmed as an abduction,810 attributing the other cases to reasons, including fleeing from domestic abuse, elopement, or 'false claims on social media'.811

In the context of the July 2025 violence in Sweida governorate, violations against Druze women were reported, including killings, detentions,812 sexual violence and abductions.813 As noted by the UNCOI, between July and November 2025 eleven Druze women and four girls were abducted and subsequently released, with perpetrators allegedly including tribal fighters and Internal Security Forces (ISF) personnel.814
